The book is basically about the life of a young woman who endured traumatizing events during her childhood, being from rejection of her father, neglect from her mother, both resulting in her living from household to household with various family members and friends. After falling prey to an uncle and others, she became a victim of sexual abuse. This caused her not only to doubt the very existence of God, but trusting anyone was far from her. Regardless of being raised in the church she found it very hard to believe in this God who was supposedly so good. Turning to a life of suicide as a mean to escape the pain, she failed even at that. Continuously trying to fill the void in her life, she became outraged, rebellious, homicidal, full of hate and even promiscuous in search of love. After all of her anger towards God backfired, and the drinking and partying didn't satisfy, she finally was forced to deal with the issues that had plagued her life and once releasing the anger and resentment towards her parents and getting counseling, God had her where He needed her, a position to heal her. Though the process was slow, He was loving her hurt away and leading her into her purpose and destiny. Now on a mission for God, she is determined to share her life because God spared her life. As a servant of the most high God, she strives to fulfill the commission in Isaiah 61:1 and let others know that no matter what struggle they may now have or how horrible their past may have been, God is more than able to take the pain and turn it into power and take their misery and make it a masterpiece.
