Tied to the Land: Household Resources and Living Conditions of Labourers on Large Farms in Trans Nzoia District, Kenya (African Studies Centre Research Series, 1/1994) Dick Foeken

This is an examination of living conditions of labourers in Trans Nzoia, one of Kenya's large-scale farming districts, based on a 1989 study among large farmers and farm labourers. It shows that the extent to which households depend upon the large-farm owners for their livelihood determines their economic position. It also shows, however, the costs of that dependency in terms of difficulties experienced by the labourers in satisfying their basic needs.
