First times get the glory and the high fives. When you first rode your bicycle without training wheels or got that first haircut without the booster board, the whole world applauded. But what about those last times, as forgotten as a petrified Fruit Loop under the sofa? One day you're a kid playing hide and go seek and jacks on the front stoop and next thing you know you've moved on. No more "Ollie ollie oxen-free" and "Onesies and twosies. That changes now. In fact, we here at the First Book of Last Times remember them and celebrate them. And then we kick off our shoes and slide in our socks.
